Dear «HeadTitle_name» «HeadLastName»,

The Young People Omnibus 2023

I am writing to invite your school to take part in our annual study of young people, the Ipsos Young People Omnibus (YPO). Building on the success of previous years, we would very much welcome your school's participation.

The omnibus asks about some of the biggest societal and personal issues affecting young people. Questions this year will cover topics such as young people's attitudes to higher education, climate change, gambling, and online behaviour. The findings are used by public and voluntary sector organisations to shape services that help to support young people.

How your school can help

We would like pupils from two class groups to complete a 25 minute online questionnaire in a classroom setting. For older year groups a tutor period should provide sufficient time to complete the survey. In a classroom setting, teachers or non-teaching staff would introduce the survey and supervise the sessions themselves - an interviewer is not required. We know this is a busy and challenging time, especially with strike action planned for 2023. The survey does not require a teacher to be present, it can be supervised by non-teaching staff. It does however require most of the pupils in the class group to be present.

£100 to say thank you

For each school that takes part, we will arrange a bank transfer for £100. Each participating school will also receive a resource pack designed to support the planning of tutor time discussion, and an A3 poster highlighting key findings from the study for use in class.

Complete confidentiality

Participation in the study is completely anonymous and confidential: neither schools nor pupils will be identified in the results.

There is more information about the survey over the page. If you have any questions or if you would like to take part, please email us at UK-PA-YPO2023@ipsos.com .

A member of our team will be in touch with you soon. We very much hope that your school will be able to take part in this research.

Yours sincerely,

Jessica Ozan

More information

Who are Ipsos?

Ipsos is an independent research agency. It has extensive experience of carrying out research with young people around issues including education and training, employment, sport participation, health, and a range of other societal issues. Further information about Ipsos can be found at https://www.ipsos.com/en-uk.

Who is the study being conducted for and what is it about?

Ipsos is carrying out the study. The study is funded by various public and voluntary sector organisations, including The Sutton Trust, The Royal Meteorological Society, the Department for Education and the government's gambling regulator, the Gambling Commission. The questions cover important topics such as young people's aspirations, their wellbeing, climate change, gambling, and online behaviours.

Why was this school selected?

Your school has been chosen at random to take part in this study, to ensure we talk to young people attending different types of secondary schools in England, Scotland, and Wales.

How will the session work?

Ipsos will send class teachers / non-teaching staff an information pack online, which will include guidance on how to introduce the study to pupils, leaflets for pupils to keep, and a unique online link for your school. Pupils will then use this link to take part.

Will we be informing parents about the study?

Ipsos will provide a letter for schools to send or email to parents before the session. Parents will be given information about the study and how they can withdraw their child from taking part if they wish.

Will it be possible to identify pupils or the school from any results?

No. No one outside Ipsos will know which schools took part and the questions do not assess the school in any way. The study is completely confidential: the school, individual pupils and teachers will not be identifiable in the results.

Who can I contact if I have any further questions?

If you have any further questions or if you would like to take part, please email a member of the study team at UK-PA-YPO2023@ipsos.com

Some findings from the previous study

The Sutton Trust found that…

30% of 11-16 year olds say they have had private tuition

This has increased by twelve percentage points since 2005

The Gambling Commission found that…

31% of 11-16 year olds spent their own money on gambling in the twelve months prior to the survey

78% of 11-16 year olds did so because they regard it as a fun thing to do
